

Cooperation model for solar panels

Overview

What is the principle of cooperation among cooperatives?

The principle of cooperation among cooperatives relates the pillar of solidarity to cosmopolitan justice, understood as sort of an 'inter-cooperative' cosmopolitanism. To strengthen their position, energy communities and cooperatives should form secondary cooperatives and federations at regional, national and international levels.

Why is energy cooperation important?

This is because energy cooperation proves to be an efficient tool in recovery from environmental crises. This is exemplified by two cases from Japan. The first is the cooperative system between the municipal government, industry and the residences launched in Kitakyushu.

What are the 7 Pillars of energy cooperation?

As a result, this paper introduces the seven pillars of energy cooperation driven by energy justice: participation, independence, responsibility, solidarity, security, decentralisation, and education.

Are energy cooperatives able to resolve and incorporate energy justice principles?

Our study addresses the capacity of cooperatives to resolve, incorporate, and act in accordance with energy justice principles, and highlights the unique character of energy communities and energy cooperatives, discussing the need to provide them with a novel policy approach.
