Overview

What is a monocrystalline silicon solar module?

Monocrystalline silicon represented 96% of global solar shipments in 2022, making it the most common absorber material in today's solar modules. The remaining 4% consists of other materials, mostly cadmium telluride. Monocrystalline silicon PV cells can have energy conversion efficiencies higher than 27% in ideal laboratory conditions.

The most promising N-type TOPCon monocrystalline silicon photovoltaic module is examined through the life cycle environmental impact assessment, and focus is placed on optimizing the production process of industrial silicon, poly-silicon, silicon rod, silicon wafer, photovoltaic cell, and photovoltaic module.

What are monocrystalline c-Si cells?

Trusted by solar module manufacturers around the world, our monocrystalline c-Si cells are produced using best-in-class raw materials and subject to strict quality control. They deliver a number of performance benefits to PV module producers: High Cell-To-Module ratio through precise cell conversion efficiency sorting.

How are crystalline silicon solar modules made?

The manufacturing process for crystalline silicon solar module can be split into 4 main steps (read more about the silicon supply chain): Mined quartz is purified from silicon dioxide into solar-grade silicon. There are many smaller steps to this process, including heating up the quartz in an electric arc furnace.
