

Juba shuts down green base station service

Overview

Why did Juba shut down its power plants?

Fuel suppliers hoarded petroleum, forcing the state-owned power plants to shut down indefinitely, including Juba's 17-megawatt diesel power station. Meanwhile, ants chomped away at the aging wooden power poles in urban areas. Plans to expand the nation's generating capacity were swiftly shelved.

Will South Sudan build a hydropower project near Juba?

The utility is looking for investors to build a 120-megawatt hydropower project near Juba, which could cost $490 million to construct over five years. South Sudan's government says it also plans to invest in the 1,080-megawatt Grand Fula project proposed near the Ugandan border, though how and when it would do so is unclear.

Why did South Sudan shut the oil pipeline in Heglig?

South Sudan's oil exports are facing renewed risks after its northern neighbour ordered the shutdown of the pipeline in the Heglig area after rebel attacks. The decision by Sudan's Ministry of Energy and Petroleum came after the Rapid Support Forces (RSF) launched a strike targeting the pipeline.

How will Juba's oil shutdown affect oil production & flows?

The shutdown, communicated to Juba, is expected to impact oil production and flows from the country's largest oilfields in Unity State. In a letter to oil companies operating in the region, Fadul Mahmoud, Undersecretary in the Ministry of Petroleum, stated that the ministry could no longer guarantee the safety of personnel on site.
