

Ulaanbaatar solar container communication station wind power construction sharing

Overview

Who manages the energy sector in Ulaanbaatar?

The energy sector is planned and managed directly by the national government [ 13 ]. Electricity and heat are distributed and operated by state-owned enterprises [ 17 ]. Policies in the energy sector are determined by the national government, and the city of Ulaanbaatar sets its local energy policy within the national framework.

How can Ulaanbaatar achieve energy growth?

Current energy shortages in Ulaanbaatar and future energy growth can be met by low emission energy sources. More technological options and price reductions in renewable energy technologies and private sector leadership. Renewable energy potentials. Political instability risks slow, stop, or change the implementation of energy policies and projects.

Is Ulaanbaatar's energy system outdated?

In contrast, Ulaanbaatar's current energy system was rated by 63 % of respondents as outdated and inadequate for current needs, requiring significant investment in renewal and expansion.

Is Ulaanbaatar able to manage its budget independently?

Ulaanbaatar is now able to manage its budget independently and attract investment. There is a lack of vision and goal for SET at the local level. MUB has limited power over the energy system, specifically no role in electricity supply.
